Book Reviews

- Ariella Lang's review of Susanne C. Knittel (2015), The Historical Uncanny: Disability, Ethnicity, and the Politics of Holocaust Memory. Knittel's discussion of Germany and Italy weave together analyses of text and place to create a comprehensive commentary on the evolution of memory.
- Bjorn Krondorfer's review of Nina Fischer (2015), Memory Work: The Second Generation. The great value of this book is that it demonstrates how the children of Holocaust survivors interact with their parents' experiences and stories over time.
