2016 AHDA Fellowship Program Now Accepting Applications

The Alliance for Historical Dialogue and Accountability (AHDA) Fellowship is a unique opportunity for practitioners who are interested and engaged in historical dialogue work to participate in both training and academic study at Columbia University. Fellows have included representatives of civil society organizations, journalists, filmmakers, teachers and artists. The Fellowship seeks to build a network of historical dialogue advocates, to foster a dynamic academic environment for Fellows to initiate and develop new projects, and to facilitate discussion about the past in their respective societies. Scholarship

Book Reviews

- Magdalena Zolkos's review of Claudio Corradetti, Nir Eisikovits and Jack Volpe Rotondi, eds. (2015), Theorizing Transitional Justice. The excellent essays in this volume should inspire critical theorizing of/in the field of transitional justice and, hopefully, contribute to its uncoupling from liberal paradigms of political change.
- Nina Schneider's review of Agata Fijalkowski and Raluca Grosescu, eds. (2015), Transitional Criminal Justice in Post-Dictatorial and Post-Conflict Societies. The multidisciplinary authors of this edited volume contribute to a growing body of critical transitional justice studies with a specific focus on criminal accountability measures.
